SPRINGFIELD GLOBE-REPUBLIC

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, THURSDAY EVENING, JANUARY 29, 1885

OWEN, PIXLEY & CO. Ohio Valley and Tennessee: Cloudy weather generally colder, variable winds, lower barometer

റ SEE SEE WHAT US 50 FOR CENTS YO JR WILL EARS' DO SAKE. THREE FOR 0 DOZEN YOU PATENT IN THE MUFFS WAY FOR MEN. 0F WOMEN FANCY CHILDREN. THE COLORED ONLY SHIRT 12 ROTECT'R

WORTHY

YOUR

NOTICE.

SEE

FOR

FINE

LINEN

COLLARS

AND

DOZEN

IN

THE

LOT

STYLES

TO

SELECT

D FROM. CUFFS. NECKTIES THIS WEEK AND O GLOVES. ONLY. At a recent fashionable state or nign-

art work, held in a Van Ness avenue residence, for the benefit of a charitable object, a young wife kept dragging her husband to the vicinity of a richly embroidered chair, for sale at a fashion-

How lovely that chair would look in our parlor, Charley," she exclaimed, after several attempts to engage his serious attention to the attractive

"Rather too faney, dear," said Charley, hurrying her away. But she dragged him around again, and stopping before the coveted object, said in melting

"Now, Charley, I have just set my heart on that chair."

"Well, my dear," Charles responded finally. "I'm afraid that's all you ever will set on it." They wandered amidst the maddening crowd in that silence which attracts the alert divorce lawyer.

Who owns a prescription, after it has once been filled-the physician, the patient or the apothecary? The question comes up in a Connecticut liquor case, wherein an order for half a pint of gin has been duplicated many times, and the excise officers wish to punish some### body. SPRINGFIELD MARKETS.

CORRECTED BY CHAS. W. PAYNTER & Co. Duily Report-Wednesday, Jan. 28, 1885.

BUTTER—25c retail,
E668—Good supply; 25c.
POULTEY—Good demand; chickens, young, 20a 30c; old, 25a35c cach.
APPLES—$1 00a1 50 per bush.
POTATOES—30e per bush.
SWEET POTATOES—$1.50a2 00 per bush.
Cabbace—bull; 75c a $1.50 per bush.
ONIONS—$1 00 per bush.
SALT—Snow-dake brand, $1.30 per bbl.
Coal Oil—8%a15a20c per gal.
Lakp—10c. BUTTER-25c retail.

EGAR-CURED MEATS-Sides, Die; shoulders, %

SCHARS—A large demand and prices low; gran-ulated, 7c per lb; "A" white, 6%c per lb; extra C light, 6%c per lb; yellow C, 6%c per lb; C, 5c per lb.

COFFEE—Marke lower; Java, 20a30c per lb;
Rio, golden, 18a30 per lb; Rio, prime green, 125/a 15c per lb; Rio, x amon, 10c per lb.
SyRUPS—40a58a76c per gal;
MOLASSES—Ne Orleans, 60a80c per gal; sorgham

Bice-Best Carolina, 85% per lb. OTSTERS—30c per qt.
DEIER APPLES—5 1-3c per lb.
DEIER PRACHES—10c per lb.
CHICKESS—Dressed, $7.7525.3543 50 per dorer " 1256c per 1b.
" $2 75a3 50 per dor. DUCKS— $2 10ks | RABBITS—$1 25a1 50 per doc. WOOL.

Fine washed, 28a30e; unwashed, 1/2 off. DRIED PRUITS. RAININS - New 10a1234c per lb, Cohrants - New 754c per lb, Applas - New 854c pe. lb. Practes - Haiven 1254c; mixed 834c per lb, Prunks - New 754c per lb.

MUTINY AND MURDER.

English Sailors Kill Their Captain. Get Caught in a Storm and are Towed Into Plymouth and Into Jail.

Fire at Philadelphia --- Thirty-Nine Horses Burned.

Another Ohio Coal Mine Set on Fire---Loss $200.000.

Opera House Burned.

Investigation as to Causes of Fire.

Washington, January 29.-At the second day's session of the National Board of Trade, Mr. Covington, reported a resolution from the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, asking an investigation of the cause of waste of the country's wealth by fire, and that investigation be made, either by a committee of the Board, or by a committee to be appointed by Congress. Mr. Covington that he did not believe in the efficiency of a congressional commission. There was not the slightest doubt that fire losses in this country could be reduced from $120,000,000 a year to $100,000,000. He would be glad to have a resolution adopted and forwarded to Follett, member of Congress from Ohio, as he was now acting in a similar matter. The resolution was adopted.

The committee to which was referred various propositions touching National Bankrupt legislation presented a report in favor of the enactment of the Bankrupt bill already passed by the senate. The report was adopted.

The proposition relating to fictitious bills of lading then came up for discussion and Sterne, of New-York, addressed the Board upon the subject.

A Coal Mine Set on Fire.

CINCINNATI, January 29 .- The Times-Star's special says: The New Straitsville, O., mine at Plummer Hill was fired this morning. There is no hope of extinguishing the fire. The mine is valued at $200,000. Au additional guard was brought here yesterday. It is supposed that the cause is incendiarism.

Mutmy and Murder.

London, January 29 .- The crew of the British bark Wellington mutinied off Cornwall, killed the captain and severely wounded the mate. The captain and mate, in defending themselves, wounded three of the crew. The mutineers being short of hands to manage the ship, and the sea being very rough, to avoid having the vessel wrecked, signale passing steamer and were towed into Plymouth, where the mutineers were at once placed under arrest.

The Hennepin Canal at Albany. ALBANY, January 29.-The Committee on Commerce and Navigation reported favorably Arkell's resolution requesting Congress to appropriate $30,000,000 for the Hennenin

The resolution is being debated with considerable warmth by the Senate. The Assembly adopted the Hennepin Canal resolutions without debate.

Manslaughter.

New York, January 29 .- The jury in the case of Philip Longes, tried for the murder of his brother-in-law, John Hester, a Bowery tailor, came into court this morning with a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree. The jury strongly recommended the prisoner to the mercy of the court. Judge Gildersleeve sentenced Loges to State prison for seven years.

Opera House Burned.

RONDOUT, N. Y., January 27 .- In the fire last night the principal losses were the Saurpson Opera House, insured for $30,000; Sampson & Ellis $12,000; Thomas Barke $1,500; E. Sherer, $7,000, on botel. The fire started in the Sampson Opera House and communicated to E. Sherer's hotel adjoining. Minor losses will run the total up to $50,000.

Congress. WASHINGTON, January 28.—SENATE-No. business of consequence was done. The Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned House Clay reported concurrent resolution providing for counting presidential vote in the hall of the House. Resolution passed: To report to the House the status of James S. Robinson as a member of that body. Message from the secretary of the navy received in regard to rewarding certain residents of Siberia for kindness shown the Jennnette survivors and members of the search

Report presented: The six months' naval appropriation. Hon. J. W. Reed, member-elect of the House from North Carolina to succeed Mr.

Scales, took the oath of office. Ohio Legislature.

COLUMBUS, January 28.-SENATE.-Bills passed, making appropriations for principal and interest of the public debt. Senate bills for condeming material for road improve-

House-Bills introduced: Providing for sending professional criminals to the penitentiary for life; giving managers of the penitentiary a salary; for Governor's mansion; authorizing mechanics' institutes to borrow money; making terms of county treasurers three years, extending time for shooting ducks thirty days. Bills passed: House bills prohibiting ouses of opium joints; prohibiting railroads from employing persons who are color blind; amending jury laws; Mr. Littler's bill authorizing Springfield to construct improvements and issue bonds to pay for the same; requiring infirmary directors to approve bills; authorizing Xenia to borrow money; authorizing construction of Franklin court house. Senate joint resolution indorsing the Nicaragua canal was adopted. House joint resolutions were adopted requesting State Horticultural society to collect statistics regarding yellows in peaches, and thanking William Henry Smith for compiling St. Clair Cable Broken.

New-York, January 29 -The manager of the Direct Cable Company says: "Our cable br ke, 300 miles east of Nova Scotia. It will be repaired immediately. It is expected it will be in working order next week. We have made arrangements for business by an other cable.

Thirty-Nine Horses Burned to Death. PHILADELPIA, PA., January 29-A fire it the livery stable of Charles E. Smith com pletely destroyed the building and thirty-nine horses were burned to death.

NEWS NOTES.

Two Hebrews, one a Russian and the other an Austrian, have joined the Methodists, at Cincinnati, and will study for the ministry Thankful Tanner, who was knocked down by Mrs. Garfield's horses, was kindly cared for by that lady, who supposed she was not seriously injured. She now sues for $25,-The Cleveland Plain Dealer says she "has figured conspicuously in police cir-

Active Democratic politicians are asking Hoadly to appoint L. A. Rungan or J. L. Wilson, of Warren county, to succeed Judge

A meeting of Cincinnatians who are is favor of transforming the canal into a boule vard will be held in the Music Hall, Saturday night, and the Ohio Legislature is expected to be present, entire.

The National Silver convention, having for its object the organization of a systematic and determined opposition to the demonetization of silver, and to prevent by all possible means any legislation in Congress looking to the decrease of the present rate of silver coinage, assembled in Denver, Wednesday afternoon. Fully 1,000 delegates were present, representing Colorado, Kansas, Utah, Idaho, New Mexico and Wyoming. A temporary organization was effected.

Ex-Governor Moses, of South Carolina, is dead beat and fraud.

The Liberty bell is in place at the exposition at New Orleans.

During the series of battles, including the conflict at Abu Klea wells, the rebel loss in killed and wounded was about 3,000, and the British loss 104 killed and 216 wounded. General Gordon is in full communication with the Stewart expedition and he has given to it 500 of his men. Sir Charles Berestord has gone to Khartoum to confer with Gordon. One of Gordon's vessels bombarded Shendy, almost destroying it. The Mahdi is reported to intend reintorcing his men at Metemneh, and further hard fighting is probable. British reinforcements are hastening from Korti to Gubat, the route being open.

A report is circulated in London that a female was captured while entering the Royal Exchange with dynamite in her possession. Three men, her supposed accomplices, are also reported arrested.

Governor Stanford, of California, was elected United States Senator. The New York Legislature has passed an anti-dynamite bill. The Republicans of Chillicothe, Ohio, have snapping at hearing her hero di-parzed a "Garfield Club." Edward Perry was killed by an engine on the Wabash Road at Danville, Ind.

Chas, J. Rogers was hanged at Portland, Oregon, for a murder committed last October. The residence of C. R. Stanhope, of West Williamsfield, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $30,000.

Herbert Goodall, of Ironton, Ohio, attempted to take his own life while delirious of tvphoid fever. H. H. Warner, the patent medicine man of Rochester, N. Y., is a Republican candidate for Governor. Colonel W. H. Hill, ex-President of the Board of Hamilton County Commissioners, is dying at his home at Sharon, O. Rev. R. F. Thomas, pastor of the Methodist Church at Lancaster, O., has been adjudged insane and sent to the Columbus Asylum.

Dora Efferman, sixteen years old, was arrested at Palestine, Ind., on several charges of arson, to three of which she pleaded guilty.

The Tax-payers' League of Cincinnati determined to send a committee of fifty to Columbus to watch the Democratic Legislature. A number of fishing craft were overtaken by a blizz ard off New Foundland, and some lost. The crews of the missing craft number fifty sailors. Kate Conner, an employe at Gray & Baffy's furniture manufactory, Detroit, Mich., fell through the elevator shaft from the fifth floor and was instantly killed. There is trouble brewing in the Tuscarawas Valley mining region, the miners declining to accept the reduction which is ordered to go into effect on February 1. An explaring party has left Portland, Oregon, for a two-year tour up the Copper river to its source, across country to the beadwaters of the Yukon river, and down that to

The jury in the case of Miss Alice Conroy vs. the Panhandle railroad for damages sustained by the death of her husband, who was killed on the road at Logansport, Ind., returned a verdict for $5,000.

A drunken Hungarian, at Penn Haven Junction, Pa., threw his child upon a red-hot stove, and when the mother ran to rescue it, knocked her down and beat her in a terrible manner. Mother and child are expected to

A ball making the Governor, Auditor of State and Secretary of State a commission to provide a Governor's residence, at a cost not to exceed $85,000, is now in the House and likely to pass that body. Meantime the Smith residence, near the Capitol, is to be sold by order of Court, and it is supposed it will be knocked down within the amount named in the House bill.

Our diplomatic establishment consists of thirty-six missions, filled by fifty Ministers and Secretaries of Legation. There are four first-class missions with annual salaries of $17,500 each. These are to England, France, Germany and Russia. The seven missions in the second class are to Austria-Hungary, Italy, Spain, Mexico, Brazil, China, and Japan, the salary being The other diplomatic $12,000 a year. places are worth from $10,000 to $5000 for Ministers, and from $2,000 to $1,800 for Secretaries. The consular service embraces five places at $8,000, three at $5,000, one at $4,500, five at $4,000. eight at $3,500, twenty at $3,000, nineteen at $2,500, thirty-five at $2,000, fifty-nine at $1,500, and twenty-five at $1,000; thirty-six Consuls and consular officers are paid by fees.

HER PRIDE GAVE WAY.

Kate Willis was proud, although Annt Dorothea Barnes, with whom she lived, and whose income from well-inrested securities was ten thousand a year, oftentimes declared, with a toss of her gray head, that "she didn't see what right poor people had to be

Aunt Dorothea didn't really mean to be cruel, but she had been disappointed in love when a young woman; and as years passed leaving her still unwedded, she grew cynical, and said a great many sharp things to equeeal her really good heart. Men all said that Kate Willis was beautiful. She was tall, willowy, statnesque, and little given to emotion.

Aunt Dorothea, in her sharp, incisive ay, declared that her niece's heart was a lump of ice, and was out of all patience with her for declining the many offers of marriage that were made her by men in every way eligi-

Philip Beaucleugh, whose mother was Dorothea Barnes's old friend, came home from abroad, after an absence of ten years, rich, handsome, polished educated, and cultured. Shortly after his return, he called to pay his respects to Miss Dorothea, and the rich spinster received him very gra-After he left, she fell into a deep rev suddenly to her feet, and struck the floor sharply with her gold-headed "I'll do it!" she cried. "If that girl

At the end of half an hour, she sprang don't marry Philip Beaucleugh, I'll dis inherit her' By "that girl," she meant her niece. who, all unconscious of her aunt's plans for her future, was serenely riding through the park, cool, impassive, and thoroughly content with berself and her surroundings. She came home in time for dinner, and Miss Dorothea eyed her sharply. "Kate," she said, as the solemn but ler removed the covers, "you grow more beautiful every day, and it's high time you were thinking about marriage. Really, aunt --- began Kate. Miss Dorothea lifted her white hand warningly.

said, and Kate raised her large eyes to her aunt's face. "Philip Beaucleugh called to see me this afternoon. He has been away from England for ten years, completing his education. You have heard me speak of his mother?" "Yes, auntie, often.

"She was my oldest friend, and I, of course, feel an interest in her son. He s like his mother, and has a very comfortable income. He enquired about you, and will call to-morrow evening. am certain he is heart-free, for I took the pains to inquire. If you want to please me, you'll marry him."
"But really, auntie," said Kate, and her arched brows were elevated, "although this is leap-year, I hardly think I have the courage, to propose to any man-least of all to Philip Beaucleugh. I don't think I shall like him. Agnes Saunders met him in Paris ast year, and she says he is awfully conceited. "Agnes Saunders is a little fool!" cried Miss Dored a, her gray eyes aged. "Philip Beaucleugh is a gentle man, and his family on both sides is as good as any in the country. She was becoming angry. and Kate. who knew what her aunt's anger meant from sad experience, adroitly changed the subject.

Philip Beaucleugh called the next evening, and it was plain to see that Kate's statuesque beauty and cool, dignified reserve impressed him.

He begged permissoin to call again, and they were thrown in contact a great deal. During the hot months, he was constant vi-itor at Sea View, Miss Dorothea's charming country cottage, and he and Kate were together con-One day he came into Miss Doro-thea's cool sitting-room, flushed and excited, and after considerable stammering and hesitaiton, asked permission to woo and win the spinster's pretty niece. It was accorded him very graciously. and he went out on the beach to join the object of his adoration in a very happy frame of mind. He was a good judge of human nature, and during the few months of their acquaintance he had made Kate He knew better, therefore, than to be precipitate; and although an avowal of love trembled on his lips many times, prudence, and a sincere desire to win Kate's heart, controlled him. One day in August, when a soft haze clouded the horizon, and the blue sky overhead was as pure and bright as that which canopies sunny Italy, they strolled some distance up the beach, and finally took shelter in a cool grotte among the rocks. There was something in the sensuous lap of the ocean, and the cooling breeze, the azure sky, and the sun-flecked fleecy clouds, that roused to animation all that was poetic in Philip Beaucleugh's nature. Even Kate's heart was stirred, and she listened with flushed cheeks and beaming eyes to the man beside her.

Suddenly he caught her hand in both of his own, and carried it to his lips. Many times he had pictured this very scene, and committed to memory the gallant little speech he was to ut-

Now he could only say:
"Miss Willis—Kate—I love you. I love you. Be my wife. He had expected hesitation, covness and finally a trembling admission that his love was returned; but he was not prepared for the cool reply that followed his passionate avowal She withdrew her hand, and looked him full in the face with eyes that never wavered. "I certainly feel very much honored

Mr. Beaucleugh," she said, and her tone sent an icy chill to his heart; "but really I have never thought of such a thing as marriage. Mad words rose to Philip's lips, and the hot blood surged to his face. He checked himself by an effort, and "Pardon rue." he said, "if I have ofended you. His voice trembled, and he contin

"But I do llove you. Kate, and it is in your power to make or mar my happi-She did not deign him a reply, but arose languidly.

"Let us go itack to the cottage," she aid: "dinner will be waiting. He gave her his arm, and they walked back to the cottage in silence. Miss Dorothea saw them coming from her seat on the porch, and her sharp eyes read defeat in Philip Beaucleugh's handsome face. Kate sought ber own apartment to dress for dinner and Philip remained on the porch.

"I beneve I shall go back to the city this evening, Miss Dorothea." he said, with a faint smile. "Kate has refused

He held out his hand as though in parting, but Miss Dorothea waved him to a seat beside her. "I am older than you, Philip," she said, "and I know that proud-spirited, foolish girl better than you. She loves you, and if you go away discouraged at her first refusal, you are not the son of your mother, for she was a woman of the most persistent determination. Philip's face lighted up at these words. "I hope you are right," he said; "but she is so cold! "Love will thaw her," said the spin ster sagely. "Remain here on the same footing as before, is my advice, and wait for a favorable opportunity to again press your suit." "I'll do it!" he cried. And when Kate came down in a bewitching dinner costume, he greeted her in the old friendly way. She colored at first, but recovering her composure, took his arm, and he led her in to dinner. A month passed away, and he had made no progress.

Cold weather came on, and the owner of Sea View went back to the city.

Philip accompanied the party, and at parting promised to see much of them during the winter season. About a week after their return to the city. Kate received an invitation from her friend, Agnes Saunders, to pay her a visit.

The Saunders had a charming residence in the Midlands, and Kate gladly accepted the invitation. She dispatched a letter of acceptance, and fixed the hour of her arrival at Saunderson, which was the nearest station to Oakdale. Upon consulting the railway time table, she found she would reach there about sun-down. The Saunders' carriage would be waiting to drive her to Oakdale. The heavens threatened rain the evening of her departure, and the Oc ober air was chill and damp. Kate settled herself comfortably in the train, and opening the latest novel, sought to while away the four hours of weary journey before her in following the adventures of the hero and her

She became quite interested in the book, and the hours passed by unheed-

The hoarse voice of the guard calling "Churchville," roused her, and dropping the book, she started to her feet. "Oh, dear!" she cried. "Was there ever anything so stupid? I've passed my station. She looked out of the carriage win-low and beckoned to the guard.

"Have we passed Saunderson?" she "Yes, miss. It was our last sta-

"How far is Churchville from Saun-"Eight miles." She could have cried with vexation.

"I suppose I had better get off here," And the guard escorted her to the datform. In a minute she was alone, and the train was speeding away in the dis-Churchville consisted of a small sta-tion, surrounded on all sides by a dark and gloomy forest of pines, through whose slender needles the night air sobbed with a dull and eeric moan.

Involuntarily Kate shivered, and looked around her. In the distance was a house, and a man was coming down the road towards the little station. "That must be the station-master."

she thought.

orm, she walked towards him. "How soon does the need train pass "Six-turry to-morrow morning. was the gruff answer.

And when he stepped on to the plat-

"Can I telegraph to Saunderson?" "No. "Is there a hotel near here?" "There is one at the town four miles from here.

"Are you the station-master?" "Perhaps you can advise me what to lo," said Kate, choking down a sob and she told her story. "I reckon you'll have to foot it back to Saunderson, or wait for the next train. "Can you accommodate me with lodging?" "No: my old woman's sick, and we "Can I stay in the station all night? queried the girl, growing desperate. "No; t at's against orders."

"But, sir," she said, and her proue lips trembled, "you surely wouldn' refuse me shelter on such a night as ain't got no room for travelers.

this? I will pay you liberally, and give vou no trouble "Ain't got no room," reiterated the man as he moved away. "Heavens!" cried Kate, now thoroughly alarmed. "Don't leave me

The man quickened his pace, and Kate ran after him, erying and wringing her hands. She heard the rattle of carriage wheels coming down the sandy road which buried itself in the forest, and a light buggy, in which two men were seated, drove up to the station. "Hallo, Angell!" cried one of the new arrivals.

The station-master turned and retraced his steps.

Kate, who thought that she might get a ride in the carriage to the town. four miles away, walked forward also, The man who had hailed the stationmaster, jumped out on to the platform and his companion followed him.

"Gentlemen," she began, but stoped suddenly, as one of the men sprang forward with a cry of recognition. "Miss Willis Kate!" "Philip!" she cried. And forgetting her dignity and re erve, she sprang forward and was

As Kate approached, both men raised lasped in Philip Beaucleugh's arms. The tears that she had so bravely kept back, flowed freely now, and be ween her sobs she told her story. "I will drive you to Oakdale, self," said Philip; "that is, if Jack," and he presented his friend, Mr. Jack Hubbard, "will allow me the use of his buggy. "Certainly, my dear fellow," said Hubbard. "I can make my way back afoot.

And turning to Angell, the station master, he rated him roundly for his churlishness and brutality. Philip lifted Kate into the buggy, ar ranged her satchel and parcels under the seat—her trunk had been put eff at Saunderson-and then picking up the reins, took his place beside her. They drove off into the gathering gloom, and by nine o'clock, Kate reached her destination. She wrote to her aunt the next day, giving a full history of her adventures. and the aged spinster smiled gleefully over this paragraph:

"Phil is down here with a friend shooting. If he had not arrived so oppor-tunely, I should have died of fright. During the drive to Oakdale, he asked me to be his wife, and I accepted him. The Supreme Court of New York U sexing Women.

The beautiful romance which at taches to the person and character of woman is gradually giving way before that which is called modern progress.

If it continues until the fair sex shall be placed on a complete "equality" before the law," as the phrase runs, with the coarser sex, the office of the romancist, novelist, poet, painter and smulptor will be gone. It is a reform backward, for it violates the law of science which relates to the mentally and bodily differences of the sexes, and TO SUIT THE TIMES of that spiritual or soul organization which, rising superior to mere matter, purifies and beautifies it. Homer tolay would not be Homer were it not for his Helen, and Phidias would be less Phidias were it not for his Venus de Medici, and Titian less Titian were it not for his glorious Aphrodite. And then what would become of the two Lords Lytton, of Swinburne, and indeed, of grand old Sir Walter Scott, when women are no longer lovable heroines? Make woman a voter, an office holder, a jury-woman, a business trader and she is at once pulled from the heroic pedestal. Judge Brown, of the Supreme Court of this State, has decided that a wife cannot only be a business partner of her husband, but can form such co-partnership with any other man. The decision was rendered in Newburg, in sight of the headquarters of Washington, whose idea was that woman should be most womanly, and which was heartily concurred in by Ladies' Fine Cloaks, five left and marked at prices that will prices.

Mrs. Washington, an American pattern wife for the world, and for all time. Other judges, notably Judge West-brook, have decided that business copartnerships of husband and wife are unauthorized by the laws of New York, but Judge Brown decides that they are legal, and that the wife's estate is liable for the debts of such copartnership. But Judge Brown takes the cake when he says that a married woman can enter into a copartnership with a person other than her husband as if she was femme sole, and carry on business together. Suppose that a pretty young wife of an ugly old codger should become "mashed" on a handsome young fellow and find it difficult to enjoy his company owing to the jealousy of her husband, who objects to his coming to her house as a friendly visitor? All the scapegraces have to do is to enter into business as copartners, and while that silences the gossip of neighbors, it legally allows the lovers to be together continually. Suppose, too, that a married man should fall in love with his neighbor's wife, the same sort of copartnership would compel his wife to put up with his abeense at "the store" with his fair partner. She could not intrude herself into their counting-room and business copartnership would furnish no ground for divorce; and so, also with the husband of the business woman! Social things would soon become inextricably mixed and marriage a fare . Judge Brown, perhaps, did not consider what an Australian boom-

Owen Meredith did about Madame La Marquise: 'As she glides up the sunlight! You'd say sh oll back in a carriage all day with a smile If soft lamps, and be wooed for a while

-N. Y. Mercury.

The Smart Salesman. "One night a sailor came into the store and wanted to buy a blanket. Of course he wanted a cheaper one than attractive prices. any we had in stock and I was afraid my man-he hadn't been here long-would let him go. Not a bit of it. He marched him off to a lot of big horseblankets and pointed out their size and dilated on their merits. The sailor seemed pleased at the size and quality, but asked what them holes were for. 'Oh,' said my man, 'that's a new thing and very popular. You just get into your berth and pass this belt (meaning the sursingle) through those holes and fasten it around you, and at ant slip off. We sell lots of them, but if you don't like it we can cut it off.'

The sailor did like it and paid his money and left the store happy.

"Another time we had a pair of fur-lined boots or shoes we could not get rid of. When, one day, a young man from the country, came in and wanted something of the sort, my clerk brought out the identical pair. The customer was delighted, and tried them on, but they were so small they hurt him badly. My salesman saw the difficulty immediately, and was as ready as ever. 'Look here, stranger,' he said, 'what are you trying to do? You've got your stockings on, haven't you?' The man admitted that he had. 'Why, these are made on purpose to save stockings,' said my new acquisition, 'we sell lots of them.' The gentleman from The gentleman from the rural district took off his stockings and his foot slipped in beautifully. He was tickled and took the shoes, paid for them, and went out well pleased." Some day the smart salesman may prove too smart for his employer. Rudeness to an Emperor.

It has been truly said that coursesy costs nothing. When Dom Pedro II was here it was proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that he was an early riser. One morning before breakly riser. One morning before breakly riser between the stroll extended to Charleston.

Praise us as we are fasted; allow us as we prove.—Troilus and Cressida.

How green you are, and fresh, in this old world.—King John.

And found it wenderus cold.

As the last taste of sweets is sweetest last.

—Richard II. its exterior from different points, then asked of a man who was sweeping out: "Can I go to the top of the monument?" "Guess you can if you try, was the curt, uncivil reply. take the car?" "Take the car or anything else you can get," was the next

The emperor ascended to the top, enjoyed the view for a while, and re-courteous word, and was about to depart, when the man told him he not a little surprised and chagrined to find that his own rudeness had been l directed to Dom Pedro II., emperor of Brazil. Boston Courier. "Isn't it a grand sight!" exclaimed an enthusiastic member of the Lowell Press Rifle Club, as the boys were peppering away at their beautifully painted target. "Very pretty," assented a stranger from the Far West. "It reminds me of a Vassar College com-mencement I once attended." "Strange!" muttered the journalist, suspiciously. "Why does our shoot remind you of a Vassar commence-"It is such a beautiful colment? ection of misses," replied the stranger dodging into a back street.-Philadel-

EXTRAORDINARY!

How to Make One Dollar Go as Far as Two Dollars.

Ladies' Cloaks from $3 up. Ladies' Plush Cloaks $13. worth $25.

Childrens' Cloaks, good and warm, $1.50, $2, $2.50, $3. $1 Cloaks all sold.

make them go. Men's Underwear at Reduced

Child's Union Suits 25c up. Ladies' Muslin Night Dresses

37c and 50c. Three-Qquarter Extra Fine Navy Blue Twill Flannel 30c. worth 45c. Good for Dresses and Shirting.

Bargains in Blankets.

erang his decision is. Let us have a real live woman who knows nothing of Bargains in Bed Spread 50c up.

> Bargains in Comforts; and on our CHEAP TABLE you will find Remnants and Odds and Ends of stock at extraordinary 48 & 50 Limestone.

A Shakspearean Bill of Fare. In Philadelphia the other evening a society lady gave an Irving box party, preceded by a dinner, a feature of which was the introduction of quotations from Shakspeare for every dish of the menu. The displayed title: "Be as merry as good company, good welcome and good fare can make good people," was from "Henry VIII." The dishes were not mentioned, but were suggested as follows:

ed as Ionows.

Gap open wide and eat him quick

—[Richard III.

And now about the caldron ling.

Enchanting all that is put in.

—[Macbeth. marvel how that fish live in the sea. -[Anthony and Cleopatra.

And my more having would be as sauce to my more naving wome.—Macbeth.

Even for the kitchen, we will kill the fowl of season.—[Taming of the Shrew.

Let the sky rain potatoes.

—[Merry Wives of Windsor.

And wondrons strange snow.

—[Midsummer Night's L. am. Some say thy famil is youth.—[Sonnet, It is very hot.—[Hamiet.

Some say thy family syouth.—Isomet.
It is very hot.—I Hamlet.
I do not shame to tell you
What I was since my conversion
So sweetly tastes being the thing I am.
Praise us as we are tasted; allow us as we

The royal tree has left us royal truit.

Richard III.
Take heed, lest by my beat you burn yourself.

Henry VIII.

A London journal seldom takes notice of any local event, unless in some way it is related to the general interests of the community or to the larger interests of the nation or the world. And under no circumstances does a returned, paid the required fee with a putable London or provincial paper refer to individuals, unless they are in some wise in public life. The "might put his name in the visitors' al, domestic, and business affairs of book," and after the visitor left was discussed in the daily press, and even the society journals of England make reference in their columns to individu-als only when they are either distin-

> Rolled gold is thus manufactured: An ingot of brass is east, and while it is yet hot a thin layer of gold alloy is placed upon it. When the ingot thus covered becomes cold it is forced between steel rollers until a long thin ribbon is produced, of which the portion of gold and brass is, of course, the same as that of the ingot. The percentage of gold is often reduced very ow-sometimes to 2 and 3 per cent. This rolled gold in cheap bracelets and zuished or notorious.

watch chains lasts for ten years.